VOL. 1 — SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 2026 — MEXICO CITY — AS OF 5:55 A.M.

YOUR DAY

Hetzner warning still open; Nu card paid; Buildathon seat locked for Oct 9

Overnight into Saturday, the German-cloud final warning has no payment confirmation. Nu mailed a payment-received note Friday afternoon. Luma approved a Reap x AIBM Agentic Buildathon spot for early October.

Ferdinand, Hetzner's Final Payment Warning / Services blocked mail from Friday morning is still sitting without a follow-up "we received your payment" notice. The attached PDF reminder remains the thing to clear before hosts stay dark. Separately, Nu confirmed Friday afternoon that your card payment landed—ahead of today's deadline—so that due row closes. Luma also approved registration for the Reap x AIBM Agentic Buildathon on Friday, October 9, 5:00-9:00 p.m. at Sandbox Hub in Mexico City.

On the repos, Friday's Codex notes on audiogram-inbox PR #10 and the failed Instagram publishing-queue checks are still in the inbox if you want a weekend fix pass. Looking ahead, weekday rituals return Monday; Redpanda's Streamhouse live session stays queued for Tuesday evening, and Checkpoint day is Wednesday night after Discovery.

TLDR

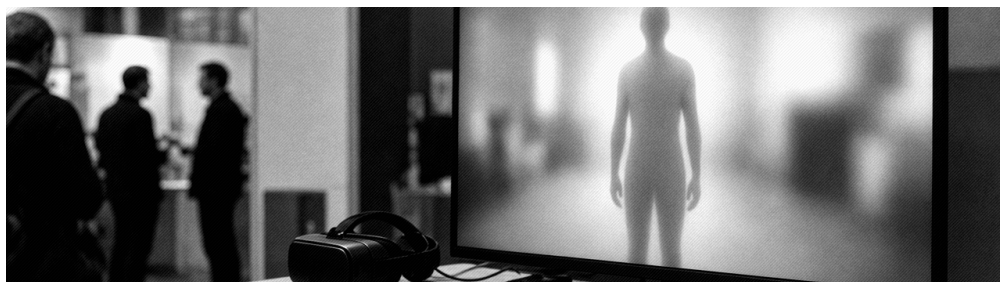

ChatGPT Pro Max leak, Muse realtime avatar, DeepSeek ARR

FROM TLDR AI

OpenAI appears to be preparing a new top-tier ChatGPT Pro Max plan. It is unknown whether the company plans to justify the tier through speed, larger usage allowances, longer-running Work sessions, or a combination of the three. The timing of the leak is notable as OpenAI's DevDay will take place on September 29.

The company is expected to discuss APIs, developer tooling, new subscription tiers, and new products at the event. Meta has introduced Muse Realtime Avatar, a technology that transforms conversations into expressive, interactive avatars in real time.

Using a seamless integration of voice and visual performance, it synchronizes speech and avatar expressions accurately in live interactions. Muse Realtime Avatar is backed by Meta's optimized AI inference stack for visual quality and real-time responsiveness.

EDITOR'S SUMMARY: TLDR AI also flags Gemini 3.8 Live with a Live Avatar, DeepSeek's alleged jump in annualized revenue after API price hikes, and deeper reads on tiny self-models inside LLMs, "neuralese" reasoning that may never show up in chain-of-thought, and TPU megakernels on Kimi K3. Quick links cover Anthropic agents bargaining for books, Taste-Bench decision-fork evals, and a DAYJOB finance benchmark for whole-assignment agents.

BYTEBYTEGO

Last call: Rebuild YouTube with AI (starts today)

FROM BYTEBYTEGO

Rebuild YouTube with AI, taught by a former YouTube engineer, kicks off on Saturday, September 26. Enrollment closes in 24 hours.

What you will learn: Scope a realistic MVP. Decide which YouTube features to build and break the work into manageable tasks. Work with agents. Plan changes, review generated code, and recover from bad diffs or sessions that go off track.

Build across the stack. Turn mockups into React pages and build a backend with Postgres, authentication, and video uploads. Add semantic search and related videos. Test with Playwright, deploy to Vercel, and track watch time in an admin dashboard.

EDITOR'S SUMMARY: The mail is a course last-call, not a new system-design essay. Byte-ByteGo Live bundles this with other courses—AI evals, cost optimization, Claude Code intensives, and a Kent Beck TDD session—under a twelve-month access pitch. Useful if you want a structured weekend build; skip if the promo is noise.

Copilot Gets a Seat in the Org Chart

BY RYAN SLOAN

In August, Mike Taylor counted 80 Microsoft products called “Copilot.” Among them, he said, were some of the best tools for building agents—if you could navigate onboarding and enterprise IT administration.

On Wednesday, at a launch event in Redmond where I spoke with executives and briefly tried the app on the demo floor, Microsoft announced a new Copilot that combines chat, code, Office, and a persistent agent called Autopilot, replacing its separate consumer and work chat apps.

Autopilot may be the most interesting piece: It can work on its own and access most of what you can. Those permissions could make it useful inside a company, but they could also prevent it from completing an ordinary task. Microsoft’s emphasis on evaluations (evals) at the launch suggests it wants customers to define what good work looks like and test whether Autopilot improves on current workflows.

The new app has three tabs: Home brings chat, delegated tasks, and Word, Excel, and PowerPoint into one place; Code lets non-developers build and share small apps within secure environments; Autopilot lets you create a persistent agent you can give a goal and set to work behind the scenes.

EDITOR’S SUMMARY: Sloan’s demo-floor test found Office-inside-Copilot solid but hit permission walls on cross-app handoffs. Autopilot draws on roughly 30 days of work, org chart, and calendar. Microsoft leans on company-specific evals so customers measure whether agents beat human baselines.

TECH NOTES

DevDay Tuesday; Buildathon Oct 9

FROM THE WIRE

No fresh Pragmatic Engineer issue overnight –last Pulse on CPU shortages already ran Friday. Two markers stay on the board instead.

OpenAI DevDay is expected Tuesday, September 29. TLDR AI’s Pro Max-tier leak is timed ahead of that event’s APIs, tooling, and subscription talk.

Separately, the Reap x AIBM Agentic Buildathon is confirmed for Friday, October 9, 5:00–9:00 p.m. at Sandbox Hub in Mexico City, with registration already approved.

EDITOR’S SUMMARY: Use the open Saturday for the Hetzner PDF if hosts are still dark; save DevDay reading and Buildathon prep for the week ahead. Microsoft’s unified Copilot + Autopilot (Every / Ryan Sloan) is the third tech thread this morning.

THE TOWN

RECOMMENDED

The Rush – Prime Video

Scott Waugh’s action film lands on Prime Video today. Alan Ritchson and Owen Wilson play forced partners racing an organ delivery across Brisbane and the Gold Coast—tight runtime (about 98 minutes), chase energy, weekend couch fit.

Tinashe – Popstar

Eighth studio album dropped Friday via Nice Life / Atlantic / Tinashe Music: sixteen feature-free tracks spanning club-forward pop and R&B. Singles already in rotation include “Too Easy,” “Crash Out,” “Melatonin,” and “Pillow Fight.” Good Saturday listen while the calendar is open.

ON THE TOWN

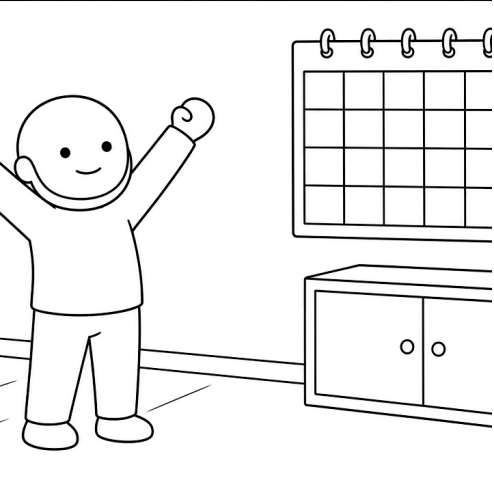

OFCM – Lebel conducts Granillo, Strauss, Wagner – tonight, Sala Silvestre Revueltas

Mexico City Philharmonic with Martin Lebel: María Granillo’s Breathing music, Strauss’s Death and Transfiguration, and the Act III prelude from Wagner’s Meistersinger. Chamber preconcert in the lobby at 5:00 p.m. (Beethoven trio); main program 6:00 p.m. Also Sunday 12:30 p.m. Centro Cultural Ollin Yoliztli / Tlalpan side of town.

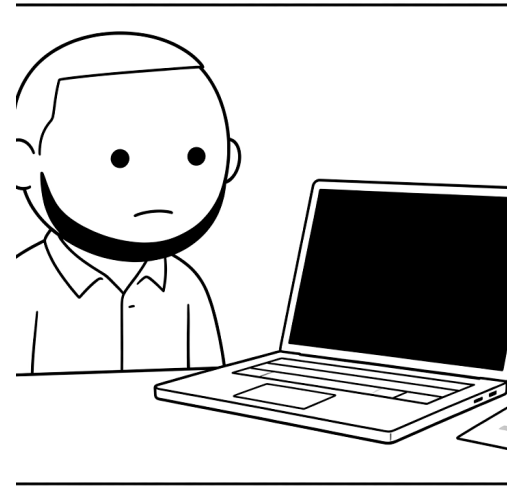

25th German Film Festival – El juicio de Hein + Flores – tonight, Goethe-Institut

Kai Stänicke’s DER HEIMATLOSE (El juicio de Hein) with Q&A, plus Job Samaniego Rivera’s short Flores. 7:30–11:00 p.m. at Goethe-Institut Mexiko (Roma Norte). Festival window runs through early October.

DEAR TIMES

Clear the host bill before the concert?

Dear Times, Saturday’s calendar is blank. Nu already mailed that the card payment landed. Hetzner’s services-blocked warning is still open with a PDF attached. There’s an optional philharmonic set and a German film screening tonight. Do I settle the host bill before I leave the apartment, or enjoy the open day and trust the servers until Monday?

– Open Inbox in Mexico City

Dear Open Inbox, Clear the Hetzner PDF first. Nu is already done; the host warning is the one that can erase the tools you might want for a weekend fix pass. The lobby trio and the Goethe screening will still start on time after you confirm payment—locked hosts will not.

WANTED

Human who opens German-cloud PDFs on Saturdays.

Must clear a services-blocked banner before optional concert tickets leave the pocket. Coffee optional; payment confirmation mandatory.

Weekend referee for blank wall calendars.

Must decide whether an open Saturday means rest or a repo fix pass. Rubber stamp optional; reading the Hetzner thread mandatory.

FOR SALE

One unused sense of Nu-deadline dread.

Retired Friday afternoon when payment-received mail arrived. Buyer assumes no further card anxiety through the weekend.

Autopilot nameplate for the org chart (conceptual).

Inspired by a newsletter agent that “reports” to its owner. Does not attend standups. Transfers as FYI only.

NOTICES

Municipal drizzle

Light rain under a mid-20s high, heavier showers possible later. Carry a shell and a compact umbrella. This is weather, not a calendar event.

Department of Host Continuity

Citizens with final-warning mail and no payment-received notice are advised to settle accounts before Monday rituals resume.
